[Transcribed by Jane Devlin]

The following account was collected from the public and family records, from tradition, and from the monuments of the dead. Of some, no dates could be found. The families are traced back as far as there are any authentic memorials of them. Those which have removed from the town are also noticed, where records or other correct information respecting them came in the way of the compiler. They are arranged in alphabetical order. The name of each family is stated in large capitals : the branches or descendants of the original family, are designated by small capitals. [t] added to the names, signifies that the persons died young.

There is a feeble family tradition that John SMITH was connected with the preceding family. If so, he must have been the oldest son of the first Thomas that lived, and was 49 years old when he married. This, however, is probably; but as it is somewhat doubtful, I have placed him after Thomas & Samuel, instead of before them, according to the order observed in respect to other families. Joseph, the son of Thomas, was a house Joiner, and his father requested the Town to grant him a certain lot upon which he might build his shop. This is the only notice I can find on record respecting him.
